Dear Doctor Allen;

I feel somewhat guilty for writing this letter so late, but I am a very poor letter writer so I feel you won't mind. Maybe I should have written you sooner but I knew you were awfully busy so I put it off until now.

Mr. Darby tried his best to get me a job at Phillips but it just couldn't be I guess. I managed to land a few jobs to help a little, but they were only extras. I've tried my best to get steady employment, but business was so bad it seemed near impossible. I was just wondering, in your letter of November 20, you mentioned something of Maurice Bridenthal, Tom Van Clave, Dr. Davidson and Dr. Billingsley. Well I know Jack and Barbara very well, but I have never met Mr. Bridenthal. Dr. Billingsley gave me
