

This column joins Coaches Weir and Petz of the Cornhusker track and field staff in voicing the prediction that, from the dual standpoint of natural ability and character, Gene Littler is destined to write for himself a brilliant page in the history book pertaining to Nebraska U. athletics.

*Tiger Grad
Complains
Out of Turn*

"MISSOURI U. Alumnus" made use of the phone yesterday to suggest that this column had been harsh to the point of being unfair in recent published references to the campaign launched by Missouri U. followers to "keep Missouri boys at home."

At the same time, the Missouri grad questioned the accuracy of the information on which this column based the charge that in the past the Missouri state highway department had been involved in the enticement of a Kansas boy to enroll at the Columbia institution rather than at a school in his home state.

If Mr. Missouri alumnus cares to pursue the matter and will call in person, this column will give him the name of a former Phillipsburg, Kas., high school boy whose enrollment at Columbia was directly due to the activities of the Missouri highway department, the enticement having its quid pro quo in the form of summer employment on Missouri roads.

*Dr. Allen
Puts Missouri
On the Pan*

AS TO the "keep the boys at home" campaign, Dr. Forrest "Phog" Allen, head mentor of basketball at Kansas U., was firing both barrels at Missouri U. during the Big Six conference pow-wow at Kansas City last weekend.

As a specific basis of complaint, the K. U. coach charged that a Missouri U. athletic department representative had written a letter to Principal J. F. Wellenmeyer of Wyandotte high school,