

OFFENSE:

The Missouri defense is to MY way of thinking the best in the conference. They have no weak links, they have excellent rebounding. I believe that we should employ a general offense. That is, use our set plays, swing and break fast. Possibly it ~~might~~ would be a smart move to have Millet play in the back line part of the time. As I need all Lobsiger will not play him too close when he is out on the court. Also this would weaken their defensive rebound. Also I think it might be possible to employ a pivot man against Mo.

DEFENSE:

IN ~~many~~ estimation this is where the game will be won or lost. In both games at Mo. they beat us on a fast break. We must either get our rebounds them or have three men back to stop their rush. One man must take the man with the ball ~~before he reaches~~ before he reaches the free throw line. Von An has shown what can be done if you hustle. Time and again he has intercepted passes thrown across the lane on the fast break. He had to run his heart out to do it, but he did it. Not once, but several times. The rest of us have been at fault in this phase of defense. The Mo. play ~~around~~ around the post and Lobsiger + Nash driving go to make up the rest of
