"Dear Doc:"

I hasten to reply to your letter of Nov. 27th.

Joan will appreciate your attitude concerning unsolicited letters and I agree with you. However, this case proves the exception to the rule.

I acted in good faith, Doc, and asked you to write a letter in my behalf because of Dr. Eversull's request. I told him that I would furnish him with a list of references whereupon he stated that he would prefer receiving letters of recommendations from my past employers. Dr. Eversull asked me to furnish him with these recommendations as soon as possible and that is the reason why I asked for your recommendation.

You see, I had an interview with
