

"Am I My Neighbor's Keeper?"

Some of the difficulties in international relations are strikingly set forth by historian James Truslow Adams in his article "I Was at Versailles" in the July, 1944, ROTARIAN. Your international service committee can make this a splendid program, applying it to the problems of World War II.

Or, devote this program to Latin America. Three 10-minute talks based on the articles on Argentina, Brazil and Chile in the May, June and July, 1944, issues of THE ROTARIAN would serve a very excellent purpose.

Or, have two members debate, "Shall power politics rule international relations?" using as a guide the debate-of-the-month in the July, 1944, ROTARIAN.

Still another program can be drawn from Ezequiel Padilla's "Now, While Trials Unite Us . . ." in the March, 1944, ROTARIAN.

"Looking at Rotary's Youth Service"

Why not appoint a member as "The Scratchpad Man" and have him review the "Scratchpad Man Visits" reported in recent issues of THE ROTARIAN. For instance, in your July, 1944, issue, "Boys Who Think Like Men," tells of British activities, while

"In the Swim in New Hampshire," gives another activity. Others are, "Art Goes Camping," "Pulaski Bends Its Twigs," "Uncle Sam, Schoolmaster" and "Yanks in Britain," in the June issue; and in the May issue, "Future Farmers of the 'Farm Mallee'" and "Boys and Pigs vs. Hunger." "Youth Today and Tomorrow"

"Fighters Who Come Home" is the title of an enlightening article in your July, 1944, ROTARIAN, on how disabled veterans are being fitted into civilian life. Get six members to read it, then join in a panel discussion on what to do when the boys come home. Another suggestion can be found in THE ROTARIAN for June, 1944, in "Uncle Sam, Schoolmaster" and "Those 'Y' Blokes," and in the May issue, "When Johnny Canuck Comes Home" and "They're Talking 'Tomorrow' in Tampa."

Or, set up a symposium on the basis of the March, 1944, symposium in THE ROTARIAN, "The World We Want!" Let youth speak for itself as it does in this article.
