

Name Board to Select All-Star Cage Squad

Coaches, Writers to Pick College Aces for Classic

BY LEO FISCHER.

An all-America board of sports editors, basketball writers and basketball coaches, covering the United States from coast to coast, will select the college squad which will take part in the second presentation of the All-Star cage classic at the Chicago Stadium on Friday night, November 28.

The writers and coaches whose names are announced today cover every recognized collegiate conference and have seen every notable cage star in action. Their task will be to select the eighteen greatest players of the past season whose collegiate competition has come to a close.

Each of the members of the committee will submit a preliminary list of the outstanding cagers from his section, without regard to positions. Later these lists will be tabulated and gradually sifted down to the final squad.

SOMETHING TO EQUAL.

The experts have something to shoot at if they intend to equal the well-balanced aggregation chosen by the all-America board last year. That team won a sensational 44-42 victory over the Harlem Globetrotters in overtime to send a capacity crowd of around 22,000 away from the stadium in a state of hysterics.

The extent to which the board covers the country means that the lesser-publicized stars have as much chance as the cagers who have grabbed headlines throughout their careers. For instance, last year, two of the standout players on the All-Stars were Ed Sadowski from Seton Hall College, Orange, N. J., and Chet Jaworski from Rhode Island State—two boys who were chosen for ability and not publicity.

PLENTY OF STARS.

That doesn't mean, of course, that the well-known cagers weren't good, too. Ralph Vaughn of Southern California and Bill Hapac of Illinois probably topped the nation in sports pages, and those who saw them in action during the all-star game know how well they lived up to every bit of advance build-up.

Nominations already are coming in, even though these lists haven't been officially opened. From this section, principal candidates are Gene Englund of Wisconsin and Joe Stampf of Chicago, who fought it out for Big Ten scoring honors, and Ed Riska, big Notre Dame ace.

Gus Broberg of Dartmouth, Si Lopello of Long Island, Frank Baumholz of Ohio U., Ossie Schechtman of Long Island, Jack Garfinkel of St. John's and a few others are getting much support from the Eastern sector, which is quite confident of placing all these boys on the squad.

DETROIT TO BE FOE.

Opposition for the all-stars this season will be provided by the winner of the world championship tournament in March—the spectacular Detroit Eagles. In winning that title, the Detroiters often came odds of about 1,000-to-1, upsetting on successive nights such great clubs as the Indianapolis Kautskys, the Harlem Globetrotters, the New York Renaissance and the Oshkosh All-Stars. Every contest was an uphill fight, too.

The game is again under the sponsorship of the Herald-American, and will be offered to fans at prices which bring it within reach of all. Tickets will range from 55 cents to $3.30. Mail orders are now being accepted. Write to Basketball Ticket Office, Hearst Square, 326 W. Madison st., Chicago. Enclose check or money-order and specify the type of ticket desired. Loop box-offices will open this week.

Cole Lenzi Elevens Open Season Today

The Cole Lenzi All Suburbans of La Grange open their football season against Alderman Kells eleven today at the Cole Lenzi Recreation Field in La Grange. The game will start at 2:30 p.m. Coach Clint Osborne, former coach of the La Grange All Suburbans, announced this will be the first of a series of contests to be played every Sunday at the home field.
