

Gregg is probably one of the smallest men ever to star in college basketball. He stands barely over five feet, eight inches. But he was able to make his lack of size an asset rather than a liability. On a floor with nine other big men, Gregg would scurry about the court to the confusion of the taller men guarding him. He had an effective left-handed shot.