-timents one for all relative to her as I mine hand and sig-
-nose that. This is the beginning of a regular correspon-dence: do not be afraid: for I shall never write to you unnecessarily to her: you cannot answer at by mis-sive with her. Then I do to see you to: the only point is where we differ about the marriage: she cannot by the laws of the land be your wife: and as a Princess of England you cannot and ought to renounce the laws of the country: I have been and always shall be a
-vil to Lady Augusta is a person in whom the hap-piness of any Brother cannot after this explana-tion you will never directly or indirectly hear me mention the subject hereby do not understand I wish you not to write about her as that I shall do in my letters mention my mistress Lady Augusta

As for publishing our correspon-dence to the papers: Pshaw Their Majesties and my sisters going to Weymouth to bathe for six weeks: they all went in good health and spirits. The Prince and Princess of Wales are for the summer at Brighton: the Duke of York is of course attend-ing to the Troops: we have another family known I am afraid will remain here: I mean the Cravens the Hertz and men have treated the family with the utmost kindness: Pitt thinks all but particularly the Prince: as for my self I have not the most distant
