Thursday evening.

My dear Mr Gilchrist

Please accept my little note of sympathy in your suffering state; for William showed me a letter from you some days ago which gives a sad account of your health. I hope you are already better, that the worst is over at last, and that you are tasting the sweets of returning health and strength; or if not I hope at least to

That such a favorable turn is as it were in sight to cheer you.

I will not ask you a single question, for this is honestly a note not wanting an answer. I will merely express my hope that all your nearest and dearest are prospering as you wish in health, and studies, and the pleasant opening of life. Pray give my love to Beatrice and Grace, Beatrice the Fair and Grace the Magnificent.

My Mother joins with Maria and William in cordial remembrances to you, and they are truly sorry for ~~what~~ you have suffered. Maria, to my regret, has not been quite strong lately, but I hope she is in the way to get better, and I too have not been very strong, in spite of a good deal of change of air this summer. Fortunately neither health nor strength is essential to remaining as I do

Very sincerely yours

Christina G. Rossetti.
