

month ago. Do you know Scarborough I wonder: we never were here before, and as yet are not enchanted, but some unexpected sunshine has just come out, and that may make a world of difference if we go and sit by the sea, for we have been having some dull mornings.

What delightful plans yours are for dividing your home between Earls Colne and London. Beatrice must be coming into bloom now, though rather like a lily than like a rose as I recollect her; — but can Grace be as funny as she used to be! and how you must miss your delightful Herbert. Percy I never saw, so must be silent about him.

When you are in London please don't forget 56 Roston Square: we are more central than we used to be, and proportionately more accessible. And till we meet and when we meet believe me

affectionately yours
Christina G. Rossetti.
