Dear Sir

Even with your valuable and kind help — for which I gratefully thank you — I have been unable to collect sufficient material for a memoir of Mr. Radcliffe. So I must write to my editor and decline the commission. Yet I fancy some one else will be enterprising enough to write the memoir, not being so readily discouraged as I am.

Thinking this, I venture to ask whether you will give me leave to put into my Editor's hands the notes, &c., you were so good as to send me? After keeping him in suspense so long I should like to afford him what help I can; but of course I will not even mention the notes in question without your permission.

Pray pardon me for troubling you thus, and let me remain

Your truly obliged Christina G. Rossetti.
