

Connecting her in my mind with my own mother for goodness & motherliness. Her family are classes
so much differing
from those of our own circle to make it otherwise than preposterous to suppose the parents of the two households
could be at all contemporaries. But I know I have a

stupid habit of expressing myself in a blundering awkward way.

I had not heard of the Countess's projected divorce. From what her sister said, I should judge it was high time; but between such an odd pair,
will it not be difficult for a court to adjudicate?

With kind remembrance
Yours sincerely
D. S. Russell
