that the picture has gained by a few slight additions since you saw it.

I wish you a prosperous voyage, and write kind remembrance to Mrs. Blackmore

Yours ever sincerely

D. G. Rossetti

W. Blackmore Esq

P.S. I should mention that the writing on the frame, being done at last moment is still wet in sending. P.S. Though it will probably be dry on reaching you, had better not be touched. The poem of Dazio degli Uberti quoted is one contained among my published translations from the Early Italian Poets, and my English version says

"I look on the crisp golden-threaded hairs Whereof, to thrall my heart, Love twists a net."
