

Mundy

My dear Hudson

I am very sorry to hear of so troublesome an attack of ill health. When I got your note before, I fancied the evil arose chiefly from the wetness of your boots in damp weather.

Shields told me you had not turned up. I will write again as soon as I know about my sewing,

It is whether you could dine with me one day this week. I hope
the evil is now mending. Perhaps you over-estimated
yourself at the desire.

Davies was with me
a few weeks ago
for a farewell visit
as he is off again
to Italy for the winter Ever yours
D. G. Alt
