

reply she is just now about to have an account - setting, in the course of which and without any great delay she will have the pleasure of transmitting to you either sum you may prefer. Not that she forgets that the beloved window remains at liberty to exceed 100 £: every detail will be cheerfully gone into at a future moment; but this proposal is, perhaps, what applies to the present time.
I dare say you saw or at least heard of the letter in a "Times" not long ago, which stirred up all our family feeling for the cherished grave, if it needed stirring up.

Pray remember us both to Mrs Shields. I heard of her the other day from Lucy.

Very truly yours

Christina G. Probert.