Gentlemen:

We have a herd of short horn and white faced cows. They are not pure bred but high grade. In the selection of a herd sire, we are giving attention to both Angus and Hereford. We shall be glad to have your judgment as to which type of sire would probably be best in producing beef cattle for the market.

We also have Ayrshire and Holstein cows and have a fine Ayrshire sire. In your judgment which would be the wiser to breed the Holstein cows to the Ayrshire and save the heifer calves or to breed them to the Angus for beef. Generally speaking does a cross between a Holstein and Ayrshire produce a good milch cow. Your advice will be greatly appreciated.

Respectfully yours,
