

back to the finish.

There are but 6 of its kind in existence.

Then when I was in Boston I was a member of the New England Historic Genealogical Society and also the Boston Numismatic Society, and when I was a boy I used to collect postage stamps and to-day do so to give away to those that have more of an interest in them than I do.

In the War the boys used to call me Souvenir King, and used to go out on the battlefield associate and battle with German and Austrian prisoners and collect and send home by parcel post the fruits of my collection, most of the things I got home, except the ball that went into my wrist when I got wounded. Often have I visited public schools and lectured at Memorial
