Dear Julia:

Your booklets have gone out and I hope they will please you. We did not have quite enough green stock to complete the order and so used Tera-cotta to fill out. I don't like to charge you anything for this work, but I realize that when I didn't charge you anything, you took the work somewhere else to be printed. Our cost on the job figures $47.35 and shall be glad to do this work without profit. I should be glad to know how this price compares with what you have had to pay in Chicago.

I had your good letter yesterday, which I took home last night. I do not recall that there was anything in it that required a definite answer. The article about me in the Anniversary Number was written by Dolph. The papers of the state were very kindly in printing notices of my anniversary and I received nearly a hundred letters and telegrams. Of all of those who were employed in Lawrence-as printers when we came here, I think that W. H. Eastman, who was foreman for us for a time, is the only one still living. Bert Dale had been a printer here before and afterwards was employed by Brady on the Journal. He is still in town, but has sold his printing plant.

I do not, at the moment, think of anything in which you would be especially interested.

The grandchildren are all bright and doing well.

Love to all,

Your brother
