Dr. C. B. Johnson,

Eudora, Kansas.

Dear Dr. Johnson:-

A friend of mine, a physician, noticing the somewhat yellowish patches above my cheek bones, suggested that I undergo a blood test, fearing that they might indicate a tendency to anemia.

I have been aware of the patches for several years, but have attached no significance to them. Take a look at me someday and if you think best test my blood for red and white corpuscles. Perhaps you have done so in your several recent examinations and have decided that all I am troubled with are beauty spots.

For a man of my age I believe I am in pretty good shape, but seem to tire a little more easily than I would wish. It's up to you Mr Einstein to say what is what, and why.

Cordially Yours,
