I am very happy that the war is over as far as the fighting is concerned, but we still have quite a job on hand to get things back on a sound basis at home. It seems peculiar that while we have been engaged in a war to stamp out certain fantastic ideologies, that there are so many in our country who wish to have quite a degree of paternalism in our own country and seek to be governed from the top down rather than from the common man up which is the original and sound American policy.

Be sure and write me again when the spirit moves you because I am always happy to hear from you.

Cordially yours,

W. C. Simons
