Dear Blanche and family:

Well Christmas is here and gone. As you know, I went to Wymore and we spent the day with the Johnson family gathering at the Dibbles at Panama. Everyone was very nice and one could not feel that he was a stranger, indeed; I am not because I have met them all before, and Gertrude and I enjoyed a dinner with them some years ago.

I want to thank you for the fine handkerchiefs and for the book "The Big Fisherman", which I am sure I shall take pleasure in reading. I also want to thank Marilyn for the box of maple sugar, which is so pretty that I hate to begin to eat it.

I am sure you had a happy Christmas party, and I am sure you enjoyed having your children with you. It will not be long before your Christmas gatherings will be made all the more pleasant by the arrival of grandchildren.

I went to Wymore by bus, but Dorothea came back with me in her car bringing Charles and Dolph. I don't know just what day they are going back, but it will be all too soon.

Lots of love to all of you
