

Friday will mark six months since Gertrude left our house. I think at some time later, you girls should get together and divide up jewelry and some of her personal things.

I went out to the cemetery again yesterday afternoon fearing that the wreathes might have been badly blown by Sunday's strong wind. Fortunately, none of them were injured.

I am going tonight to the football banquet at the Eldridge Hotel.

You may feel free to take the silver set at any time you wish. Gertrude frequently loaned parts of it for various gatherings in Lawrence.

Love to each and every one of you
