Minneapolis, Kansas

Dear Janet:

It has been several days since I have heard from you, so I shall expect a letter in most any mail.

I have tried to keep track of Mike's basketball, and it seems to be that they have won more games than they have lost.

I have just attended a most interesting program at Rotary, a short account of which you will see in today's Journal-World. The speaker illustrated some of the old and many of the newest things in electricity, jet-propulsion, etc.

The weather here has cleared up a bit, and the road down to our house is again in very good shape.

While I have thought more or less about this summer, I have made not definite plans, and I think a great deal will depend upon how quickly Dolph snaps out of the dizziness that has bothered him since he has returned. I think it is the result of the frequent and abrupt changes in altitude, from sea-level to 13,000 feet. His sense of equilibrium has been temporarily effected.

He is cooperating nicely and is putting in very little time at the office. I think it is wise for him to take it easy and to recovery as quickly as possible. If the condition does not improve as it should, I shall, doubtlessly, put in more time at the office than usual.

Gertrude's funeral was 18 weeks ago today. I have made arrangements to have the lot at the cemetery looked after as quickly as the weather permits. I have also arranged with Mr. Frowe, who revamped Gertrude's flower garden last year, to look after it again in order to keep it in good shape.

My cold, which was severe for a number of days, is very
