Dear Blanche:

I was glad to get your letter of Monday, and glad to know that there was some improvement in Pat's condition. I certainly want that boy to snap out of it. He has certainly made a wonderful fight, and I believe with him that science will find a cure for his trouble, and that he will be one of the first to recover.

I shall be very happy indeed to have you come up for as long a time as you can be away. It will do you good and it will do me good, and if Pat has competent care he probably will be glad to have you get away for a few days.

Within the last day or two I have noticed a story of a new drug that is reported to be even more successful in some cases than penicillium.

Last night I took Margaret and Otis to dinner, and afterwards to the Jayhawker to see Perfect Strangers, a play featuring Ginger Rogers, and strange as it may seem she did no dancing. I have gone to very few shows in the past few years.

Dolph and Marie are in the East and will be gone until the 29th. It is quite warm today. Nothing especially new at the office. Give Pat my love.

Lovingly,
