My dear Collie

I note what you said about not having corrected the article, which appeared the Thursday before Thanksgiving. It is funny how easily educated persons would not have noticed that if papa had been killed in the Civil War, then he could not have been your father, as he would have died before you were born — It was a very stupid mistake and I am glad you corrected it the following day. Although I am not so fond of having dates published and do not think the majority of the people care to go into the details of other folks lives.

Then our weather turned colder right after I wrote you the last time and the lake closed Nov 24 despite the very disagreeable weather. On Thanksgiving Harrison Forman and Marna came to St. C. by train and then motored on up here with Zola and Stu and in another car was Mr. & Mrs. Jim Smith and their children and Mary-Helen Stegert. So we had thirteen, counting Marna, for our Thanksgiving dinner. We had a turkey (pounded down) turkey which they were kind enough to say was perfectly prepared and cooked — and all the other traditional
