Dear Marilyn,

How are you and Robert getting along? There is nothing especially new with me excepting that Dolph, my son, deemed it best to have a slight matter of surgery done to his throat, and has been in Rochester for several days. We expect him home soon. The matter he had attended to was comparatively slight, but if neglected, might have caused serious trouble later.

There is nothing new here. Spring seems to be a little late. Last night it was cold, but I don't believe it frosted. A few flowers are in bloom close to the house.

With four children and ten grandchildren and several greats, it makes me feel a bit lonely when I sit at home and think about them. On the other hand, that is one of the things that everyone must expect and will have to go through if he lives to a considerable age.

I hope everything is fine with you and I always am glad to hear from you.

Lovingly,

Grandad
