

Mr. McKendree Johnson, New York, N. Y.

N. B. Since dictating my letter L. N. Flint, the head of the School of Journalism at K. U., has called me to state that he had a letter from F. G. Tappington, advertising manager of the Ironwood Daily Globe, Ironwood, Michigan, who wants an advertising man.

Ironwood is at the extreme tip of the northern peninsula of Michigan, being close to the Wisconsin line. The American Newspaper Annual and Directory for 1928 gives the population of Ironwood as 15,739 and the population of the county as 33,225. The Globe is evening excepting Sunday and has a sworn circulation of 5,865.

It seems queer that this call from Flint should have reached me just after writing you. Perhaps there is something in telepathy.
