

is all that is needed to bring national prosperity, several of the nations of South America should now be rolling in affluences. The beginning of social legislation in Uruguay dates back at least thirty years. Those who favor this legislation in South America admit that it has been successful to a very small degree only because of the lack of money. Roosevelt may have known this and felt that such laws would be a success in this country because money would be plentiful for their administration.

I should be very happy to hear from you and will appreciate very much your kindness in the matter.

Respectfully yours,

President,
The World Company.
