

In my letter to Appleton I told them that I could send them a translation of Dubois's memoirs - I am enclosing one of the beginning of said autobiography to let them see what they may expect, would you be kind enough to forward these three sheets to them? Excuse the trouble.

I have not yet had time to write you a line since we left London. I am very well and hope these few lines will find you the same. I have been thinking much of late about the future of the Society and the work we have to do. I feel that we must be more active and more united than we have been in the past. I have been thinking of the many friends who have been leaving the Society and the many who have been joining it. I feel that we must do more to attract the former and to retain the latter. I have been thinking of the many who have been leaving the Society and the many who have been joining it. I feel that we must do more to attract the former and to retain the latter.