

families who have been purchasers of their piano for many successive generations. Preserved proudly in their files are letters from all over the world, asking for information, or offering personal praise.

The public esteem which has been showered upon the Steinways has come from all corners of the globe, but in a way, it is more than a tribute to this family and their product—it is also a tribute to America.