Parsons Sun

Clyde M. Reed, Jr., publisher of the Parsons Sun, was among the 35 new members elected to the American Society of Newspaper Editors by that organization's board of directors.

Norton Daily Telegram

Wilmeth Kirk, sports editor, who has been in a hospital for treatment of arthritis, was able to return home. Publisher Elton Carter warned readers that during Kirk's absence the sports department might be lean reading.

L. A. Vierthaler

The Spearville News

Vierthaler bought the News from Horace L. Fry, taking possession January 2. He learned the printing trade on the Halstead Independent while in high school, later attending Kansas State Collegt and Pittsburg State Teachers College. He worked for a time on the Newton Kansan before making the deal for the Spearville News.

Mr. and Mrs. Fry have been enjoying their new freedom from the weekly deadlines by taking a trip to visit their daughter, Lieut. Kathryn E. Fry at Fort Lee, Virginia. They drove through the southern states and visited Washington and Philadelphia before returning home. They have two other daughters, Eleanor who is with the Salida (Colo.) Mail Record, and Helen who is a journalism student at the University of Kansas.

Kenneth B. Bruce, publisher of The Marquette Tribune, now in its 66th volume.
