Auburn, Nebraska

Dear Folks:

This letter is for each one of you and to express to all of you my appreciation for your thoughtfulness while I was laid up in bed. I liked the candy, the nuts, the rye bread, the flowers, the cards and letters, and the pajamas, and anything else you sent me which I may have failed to list.

You send us so many things that it is difficult to keep track of them all.

The boys are still talking about their visit which apparently was a huge success from every angle.

Marie has probably told you that I am up all the time now, but the doctor has given rather strict orders for only a few hours at the office each day.

I hope it won't be very long before we can drive up and spend a day with you.

Love to all,
