he had signed a paper he did not know the contents of and he said Mr. Barnbridge gave him that paper to sign and this Examinant further saith That Mr. Brown and this Examinant's Husband talking about the Great Man that had been there said one to the other It was a shame to see so great a Man come to such a place to see such a man upon which this Examinant asked who is this Great Man To which they both answered together Judge Eyre and laughing and talking together said who would think such a thing, One would think it a shame for such a Gentleman to be seen in such a place to visit such a fellow particularly Mr. Brown said this and her Husband said so it is But nothing is to be wondered at, at this time of Day They talked about a Ship given Judge Eyre and other large presents and this Examinant saith That this Discourse was about the beginning of last May and this Examinant saith That Mr. Brown talked as if he had seen my Lord with Mr. Barnbridge Looking towards the Wall and Cells and asked if that was part of Newgate and was told it was the place where the condemned prisoners were confined which conversation between her Husband and the said Brown was about Eight of the Clock and when Brown talked of my Lord & the Justices being there he spoke as if he had knowledge of him and this Examinant being asked
