All the standards at a standards at of be game bigynne at oo rewe and so forb and tithe alle pe deer right as pei liggen, rascaile and oper, and delyuere it to be procatours of be chirch pat owen to have it. And pan pe deer eny of hem pat shuld have parte of that deer be not per he shuld charge pe maister forster for to sende it home and pan he shuld delyuer a sertayne of pe remenaunte to pe forsaid suers and to be sergeant of be larder, and be remenaunte shuld be zeue bi pe maister of pe game some to gentilmen of be contre bi enfarmacion of be forster or parker, as bei han be frendly to be balv, and pe remenaunt to officers and to hunters as hym good liketh. And it is to wit pt every man bowe and feutrere pat hap out slayn shuld mark it pt he myghte chalaunge his fee, and have it at quirre but pt he be ware pat he mark no lordes marke ne feutreres ne hunters for lesyng of his fee. And also it is to wite bat pe fees of alle pe folies ben pe maisters of pe eirers, if so be pat he be or his depute at the huntyng, and blowe iii mote and ellis not. But who pt be maister of be game list to zeue hem, to sauf pat pe kyng sleep wip his bowe or pe quene or my lord be pryns or bat be bidde wib here owyn mouthe lat renne to. And al shalle be juged foly of rede deer bine hert and of falowe deer byneuthe pe buk. Napelees if pe eirere wil chalaunge a deer for foly pt were noon, if he be a strif with hym pat askep be fee per of be maister of be game shal deme it, and right so shal he do af alle be striues for fees bitwene bowe and bowe, and feutrere and fewtrere, and of alle oper striues and discordes pat longen to huntyng. And whan alle deer be delyuered and pat pe hunters and feuterers of be kenel be assigned for to vndo be dere pat ben delyuered for be kynges larder, pan shuld pe gromys chacechiens of be hert houndes gadir be paunches and smale guttes togyder and dight hem as is deuysed in be chapiter of be hert huntyng with strength, and gete hem a skynn to lay perouyr and do as is in he same chapiter devised wif he grettest hede and pe fairest affeted pat pei can fynde in alle pe quyrre. Saue pe blowyng of pe price and the strakyng and be meue? but be abay shuld abyde to be quyrrey be don and be flessh voided away and per shuld pe maister of pe game be, and be sergeaunt and alle be yemen and gromes of be office. And if be greihoundes3 shuld be enquyrreide it shuld be doo right as is devised hap don to go home. And than shuld be maister he usually goes home when he hath done this. And then should the Master of the Game begin at one row and so forth, and tythe all the deer right as they lie, rascal and others, and deliver it to the proctors of the church that ought to have it. And pat be hyng comaunded hym to delyver and if then (separate) the deer that the king commandeth him to deliver, and if any of them that should have part of the deer be not there he should charge the master forester to send it home, and then he should deliver a certain (part) of the remnant to the afore said sewers and to the sergeant of the larder and the remnants should be given by the Master of the Game, some to the gentlemen of the country by the information of the forester or parker, as they have been friendly to the bailie, and the remnant to the officers and hunters as he liketh best. And it is to be known that every man bow and fewterer that hath slain anything should mark it that he might challenge his fee,1 and have it at the curée, but let him beware that he marks no lord's mark nor (other) fewterers nor hunters, or he will lose his fee. And also it is to be known that the fees of all follies belong to the master of the harriers, if so be that he or his deputy be at the hunting, and blow three motes and else not, in which case the Master of the Game can give it to whom he wishes save what the King slayeth with his bow or the Queen or my lord the prince, or that which they bid with their own mouth to have chased. And all shall be judged folly of red deer which is beneath the hart, and of fallow deer which is beneath the buck, nevertheless if the harrier would challenge the deer for folly, and it is not folly, if there be a strife with him who asketh the fee, the Master of the Game shall judge it, and right so shall he do of all these strifes for fees between bow and bow, and fewterer and fewterer, and of all other strifes and discords that belong to hunting. And when all the deer be delivered, and the hunters and the fewterers of the kennel be assigned to undo the deer that be delivered for the king's larder, then should the grooms chacechiens of the hart-hounds gather the paunches and small guts together and do with them as is advised in the chapter of the hart hunting with strength, and get them a skin to lie thereover, and do as in the same chapter described with the greatest and best head (antlers) that they can find in all the curée. Save the blowing of the prise and the stroking and the menee,2 the bay should wait till the curées be done, and the flesh taken away, and there should the Master of the Game be, and the sergeant and all the yeomen and grooms of the office. And if the greyhounds 3 shall be rewarded it should be done right as is

¹ See Appendix: Hunt Officials.

² See Appendix: Menee.

³ Shirley MS., "harthounds."