

saw our people in possession of the Shore, I again had recourse to my Glass, & could plainly see, I supposed about three or four hundred at most of the Spaniards running away along the shore in great confusion, but one party in the least regular, they halted when they reached that part of the Shore ^{beach} where I observed them throwing up a work yesterday in which I could now distinctly see two of the four Guns, very close at their heels I am sure not more than half a mile from them, followed an Officer & I could count 22 Men of the Chasseurs of Livornetti, I took for granted, a sufficient number of them were at the same time advancing in the wood, at
