would not reporte you Sr. Walter wth a matter of falshood, you say, you supported the Information that Cobham had wth Aremberge by Lawrency/.

Raw: I had thought it had beene no other Intelligence but such as might bee warranted/.

Attor: Then it was but lawfull suspition, but to that whereas you say that Cobham urged you on passion, I answer you 3. wayes, first I observe when Cobham said hee was for the Ire against Aremberge, and when hee found that Count Aremberge was trusted hee trayed out Villaines, now I will confesse the whole truth/ Secondly the Accusation of a man upon hearsay is nothing/ would hee accuse himselfe upon passion and ruyne his house and posterite upon malice/ to accuse you/ thirdly relate this bee out of passion/ marke the manner of it. Cobham had said this at least two Monethes before to his brother Brooke, you are false, you are on the Bye, Rawleigh and I are on the Mayne, hee meane to take away the King and his Cubbs/ This hee deliver two Monethes before, so marke the manner and the matter, hee would not have the weapon against him and accuse himselfe to accuse you/.

Hath Cobham confessed that/ Raw:

Cobham saith hee had a great while doubtfull of Rawleigh that hee would bid him and the money to the King, did Cobham dare boast you could betray him in Jersey/ Then of necessitie there must bee trust betwixt you, no man can betray a man but hee that is trusted/ In my understanding this is the greatest Argument to prove it. hee had acquainted wth Cobhams proceedings/ Rawleigh hath a greater heart/ then to make himselfe Robinhood, Kitt or Cade, Robinhood was an Outlawe, but I never heard hee was a Traytor, and whereas hee saith that Mr. King is not onely more wealthie and potent then his Grace greatheard, but also more politique and wise, see that hee could have no hope to prevaile, I answer this, that there is no King so potent, wise and entire, but that hee may bee outdone wth Treason, whereas you say that Cobham
