ꝑ desire ꝑ may ꝯtreate ꝑsonallie wᵗʰ him.
After ꝑis my oracions talkinge wᵗʰ into ffrance and other ꝑts, so ꝑat my residence in ꝑis Countrie was verie little, till none at last ꝑ dealt wᵗʰ ꝑis vnfortunate Earlisll, who tooke vnto him one Gray for his ꝑtner and brought him vnto me, and ꝑose two ꝑ directed to take a lodginge in ꝑe ffaux, ꝑerefore ꝑe better to distroy him my selfe might come to revenge my selfe on Cumnor. But after some delay, ꝑey both told me, ꝑ could wᵗʰ noe convenience come my selfe to doo it, but ꝑe ffrench would undertake it, to wᵗʰ ꝑ assented, but prescribed neither any time nor manner how ꝑey would effect it.
After ꝑis Gray fell off, and went downe to ꝑe ffleete for Denmarke wᵗʰ Earlisll land and ashore me, and wᵗʰall told me ꝑat Cumnor was ꝑen out of towne; but since Gray had dishonored him, he would trust noe body but himselfe, and would assuredlie kill him at his returne, ꝑough it were wᵗʰ ꝑe losse of his owne life. But ꝑ being long delayed by two other wayes formerlie ꝑ spake of, and also by ꝑose two, and seeinge Gray gon, ꝑ ꝑought ꝑat Earlisll had but spoke ꝑis to winne me contente, and to insinuate himselfe into my favour; so ꝑat ꝑ left him wᵗʰout any further direccion, or mᵉᵗᵉ, regarde to his speede, and never geard more of him, untill ꝑ heard ꝑat Cumnor was slaine; ꝑe tyme wearesome and ꝑe manner ꝑ detest before God and his Angells ꝑ was altogether ignorant of; For had ꝑ supposed it to have bine done, ꝑ would not have stayed my selfe here at last a last; before ꝑat tyme ꝑ could wᵗʰ ease gon over into ffrance, for ꝑ had a tyranne to trouble and for transporting some horses.
3 Another aspcion is laide on me, ꝑat ꝑis was Gods Judgem, for ꝑat ꝑ was an ill natured fellowe over revengefull and delighted in blood.